LOVE SONG.

"Tell me, gentle traveler, then
Who hast wandered far and wide,
seen the sweetest form blow
And the bright'st eyes glint;
say, of all thy eyes have seen,
Which the fairest kind has been?"

"Lady, shall I tell thee where
Nature seems most fond and fair
Far above all others beside?
'Tis where those we love abide,
And that little spot is blessed
Which the Loved one's foot has pressed."
—From the Persian.

THE ROUND OF LIFE.

Two children down by the shining strand,
With eyes as blue as the summer sea,
While the sinking sun fills all the land
With the glow of a golden mystery;
Laughing about at the sun-glow's eve,
Gazing with joy on its snowy breast,
Till the first scar looks from the evening sky
And the rainbow bars stretch over the west.

A soft green dell by the breezy shore,
A sailor lad and a maiden fair;
Hand clasped in hand, while the tale of yore
Is born again on the listening air,
For love is young, though love be old,
And love alone the heart can fill;
And the dear old tale that has been told
In the days gone by is spoken still.

A trim-built home on a sea-lined bay;
A wife to sing out on the grieving sea,
A prayer for the loved one far away,
And prattling imps 'neath the old wood-tree.
A lifted lat'ch and a radiant face
By the open door in the falling night;
A welcome home and a warm embrace
From the love of its youth and life's full prime bright.

An aged man in an old armchair;
A golden light from the western sky;
His wife by his side, with her silvered hair,
And the open Book of God close by.
Sweet on the bay the gloaming falls,
And bright is the glow of the evening star;
But dearer to them are the jasper walls
And the golden streets of the Land afar.

An old churchyard on a green hillside,
Two lying still to their peaceful rest;
The fishermen's boats going out with the tide
In the fiery glow of the under-west,
Children's laughter and old men's sighs,
The night that follows the morning clear;
A rainbow bridging our darkened skies,
Are the round of our lives from year to year!

Select Story.

ROSE GERANIUM.

"I hate the odor!"

Harry Penryth dropped the tiny spray of rose geranium which he held, and a shudder crept over him. It was on a wide, cool veranda of a large hotel at one of the fashionable watering places, and his companion was Mrs. Warburton, a young and lovely widow. She looked up into his handsome face with a peculiar glance from under her long eyelashes.

"Why, Mr. Penryth," she cried, gayly, "what an idea! To hate a flower."

He tried to smile, but it ended in a failure.

"I will tell you, Mrs. Warburton," he answered, "and then perhaps you will understand me better. In the first place, ever since I can remember—even when a child—the odor of rose geranium caused a curious sickening sensation to creep over me. I can not understand it; it is a sort of antagonism or repulsion, for which I fail to account. Then later—"

He paused, and a far away look stole into his dark eyes, as though recalling the past; a leaf turned down on some page of his life-history.

"I heard a dear friend once," he went on after a pause, "a dear friend—never had another. Gerald Brookes and I were like brothers; modern editions of Damon and Pythias they used to call us in the college where we were educated. I had no hopes nor aspirations apart from Gerald; and his interests were as dear to me as my own. Nothing could hurt him which did not hurt me.

"I regretted exceedingly—regretted with a strange pang of jealousy—when at last, in the course of events, Gerald fell in love. The lady was one whom he had met while traveling for the firm which employed him. I never met Miss Delorme, but I learned she was the perfection of grace and beauty; an elegant and accomplished woman, and, withal, an arrant coquette. She was heartless and unprincipled, and sang about breaking my friend's heart, coolly, deliberately and systematically. Mrs. Warburton, that woman was as certainly the murderess of Gerald Brookes as though she had slain him with her own hand, for she blighted his hopes and ruined his peace and lured him on with her false, deceitful smiles, and her glorious beauty, until he confessed his love and cast his heart at her feet, only to be laughed at and told scornfully that she was on the eve of marriage with a decrepit old millionaire.

"Now Miss Delorme's favorite perfume—so Gerald had told me—was rose geranium. She wore the flowers frequently; its scarlet spike glowing in vivid relief in the braids of her jet black hair. Somehow I came to associate the two—the woman and the flower—which I so unaccountably disliked, and a feeling sprang up in my heart for Miss Delorme which grew and flourished like the blossom itself—a feeling of strong aversion.

"And so time passed, and poor Gerald was daily fed with false hopes and illusions until at last the blow fell. Had I been in his place when the knowledge of her baseness came to me, I should have spurned her as an obnoxious reptile from my path; but Gerald was not made of as stern stuff as I am, and so he could not recover from the shock. Oh! Mrs. Warburton, it was an awful blow to me when they told me the dreadful truth that Gerald Brookes had taken his own life!

"It all occurred in the far South, where he was traveling. I sent at once for his body—poor murdered boy! It came. He looked like a marble statue lying there, white, cold and dead, his hands folded over the heart that had beaten with true and faithful love for the woman who was the cause of all this, and clasped in his dead hands I found a spray of rose geranium which I tore from his grasp; I could not see his body desecrated by anything she had touched or cared for. From that hour I have hated the color and sight of the blossom with greater intensity than ever. It may be childish and weak in me; if so, I confess my weakness, but I cannot resist it."

He paused and rested his handsome head on one white, shapely hand. Harry Penryth was young and wealthy, and many a woman had endeavored to awaken a responsive chord in his heart. But, although he moved in gay society and was courteous to all, and attentive to some, no woman had ever really touched his heart until he met sweet Lily Moreton. But Ethel Warburton, the rich young widow, loved him with a most wild, absorbing passion which carried everything before it. The crafty Mrs. Warburton soon discovered that there was no engagement existing between Miss Moreton and Mr. Penryth, and racked her brain for some method of disenchanting the young man, and turning his love for Lily into aversion and dislike.

While Harry Penryth related the story of his friend and his tragic death, Mrs. Warburton's face had grown very white; a wild, haunted look stole into her eyes, and the little hand, which held a sprig of the obnoxious rose geranium was icy cold and trembled.

She threw the flower away.

"I'm so sorry I offended you with my geranium," she said, humbly, "it is no favorite of mine."

It was a deliberate falsehood, but no matter. "The end justifies the means"—at least she thought so.

As soon as she was alone in her own chamber she paced the floor like a caged tigress.

"My God!" she panted, breathlessly, "what would he say—how he would scorn me, if he knew that I am Ethel Delorme, the woman who jilted Gerald Brooks! But he never shall know. I love him! I love him! And I shall win him if I die for it." She fell into a profound reverie. All at once her dark face lighted strangely. "I have it! she exclaimed. "I believe I can see my way."

That night Mrs. Warburton stood before the mirror in her room arrayed for the hop which was to take place below stairs. She was regal in cream satin and lace, with white roses in her magnificent black hair. She moved slowly toward a window where a pot of rose geranium was sitting and stooping over it, broke off a mass of scarlet bloom. Then humming softly to herself, she left the room, crossed the wide corridor and tapped at a door.

"Come in!" cried a sweet voice, and Mrs. Warburton turned the knob and entered Lily Moreton's room.

"How lovely you are!" she cried, rapturously, a jealous pang at her heart, meanwhile, as her eyes fell on the slender figure in white lace and pearls. "But oh, Lily, my love!" she added with a gush of apparent sincerity, "why do you wear pearls? See, I have brought you some of my favorite flowers. I raised them myself. I cannot wear them with this gorgeous costume; red and yellow would be too gorgeous for me and I do think this dash of scarlet with your lovely white face would be too pretty for anything. Will you wear them, ma chere?"

The young girl looked pleased. She was a sweet, tender-hearted little thing, incapable of deceit, and therefore, unsuspecting.

"You are very kind, Mrs. Warburton," she replied; "indeed I will wear them."

So the wily widow fastened the red blossoms in Lily's golden hair and at her throat and waist as conspicuously as possible; then, her work accomplished, she flitted away.

When Lily descended to the grand salon below she was joined at once by Harry Penryth, who offered her his arm for a promenade. A pair of flashing black eyes followed the two as they moved slowly through the rooms, and a pair of rosy lips curled with a strange smile as she saw Harry Penryth gaze fixedly at his companion, and turn pale to the very lips. The subtle instinct which so strangely affected the young man, was slowly but sure entering his heart.

After a time Mrs. Warburton observed Mr. Penryth making his way through the crowd to her side. He looked pale and troubled.

"Come out and walk, Mrs. Warburton, will you not?" he said, offering her his arm. With a triumphant look in her eyes, she arose, and they strolled out into the moonlight.

"Where is Miss Moreton?" queried the widow, archly.

"I do not know," he replied, a trifle coldly. "Let us sit here," he added, pointing to a rustic seat.

It was a lovely night. His companion was beautiful and fascinating. Heaven only knows of what foolishness Harry might not have been guilty, but just then a voice fell on their ears from the shrubbery near.

"Ah, Dupont!" cried a man's voice, and a whiff of cigar smoke floated by. "why didn't you tell me the Delorme was here?"

"Delorme?" returned his companion; "I don't know of whom you are speaking."

The first speaker laughed lightly.

"You remember the woman who jilted Brookes, don't you? Poor Gerald! he was a noble fellow! Well she afterward married old Warburton, the millionaire, and worried him into the grave within a year. She's a fascinating widow, and the young men (who do not know her) flock round her like moths in a candle! I hear Penryth is the last victim!"

"Indeed?" laughed the other, and the two passed on

Harry Penryth turned on his companion a face of marble whiteness. "What does this mean?" he gasped. "Answer me; are you Delorme?"

She laughed recklessly.

"Is it fair to place me forever under a ban?" she asked, "just because a man whom I never could love, was foolish enough to care for me? Mr. Penryth, I was not to blame, listen."

"Hush!" he said, sternly. "Don't attempt any palliation. Shall I take you back to the house, Mrs. Warburton?"

And Ethel Warburton knew that it was all over, the game was played, the die thrown and lost!

* * * * *

Alone on the moonlight veranda Lily Moreton sat, pale and sad. Harry Penryth came to her side and bent tenderly over her.

"Lily," he whispered, "where did you get those geraniums?"

She started slightly and blushed.

"Mrs. Warburton gave them to me," she replied; "isn't she kind?"

"Very," he answered dryly. He then sat down beside Lily, and told her the story of his friend and his tragic fate. Before it was concluded she had torn the blossoms from their resting places and tossed them over the veranda railing. They fell on the grass plot below, right at the feet of Ethel Warburton. And recognizing them she knew the truth, knew her wicked wiles had not succeeded, all was lost.

And she was right, for before the season was ended the newspapers announced the wedding of Lily Moreton and Harry Penryth.

Unaccountable Antipathies.

THE ODD AVERSIONS THAT HAVE TERRIFIED MEN, THE WISEST AND MOST COURAGEOUS.

Shakespeare in his "Merchant of Venice" has a well known passage concerning the unaccountable antipathies of some men, and an interesting book might be written upon the subject. Not unfrequently these antipathies are strongest and—apparently—most ridiculous in people whom one might suppose to be loftily superior to anything of the sort. Scaliger turned pale at the sight of watercress; neither he nor Peter Abano could ever drink milk; Cardan was disgusted at the sight of an egg; a French lady "never could abide" boiled lobsters, and Ambroise Pare records the case of a gentleman who is similarly affected by the view of cooked eels. Vaugheim, a famous Hanoverian sportsman, slew wild boars innumerable, but ran away from a roast pig, or fainted if he had not time to beat a retreat. Marshal d' Albret was so terrified at the view of a pig's head that Bassy says that if any one had fought a duel with the Marshal with a pig's head in his left hand he would have had as much advantage as if he had worn a suit of armor. The smell of fish threw Erasmus into a fever. King Vladislas of Poland ran away from an apple. Zimmerman records the case of a lady who shuddered on touching the velvety skin of a peach, silk and satin being equally obnoxious to her. Dr. Beatty tells of healthy and strong men whom the touch of velvet disturbed. Lord Barrymore could endure anything but a pansy; the Princess of Lamballe anything but a violet. Gretry, the composer, and Anne of Austria abhorred the smell of roses. We read of a monk who fainted on seeing a rose, and never quitted his cell during the season of their flowering. Favorita, the Italian poet, had a similar aversion and so had Vincent, the painter, and Scaliger tells of a relative whom the sight of a lily threw into convulsions. Henri III fainted on seeing a cat, though he was passionately fond of little dogs. The Duke of Schomberg had the same mortal antipathy, and the case is recorded of a gentleman who could not even bear to walk under a sign board bearing the image of poor puss. The Duke of Epernon was unaffected by the sight of a hare, but the view of a leveret would throw him into a cold perspiration. The Marshal de Breze fainted at the sight of a rabbit; in this case the antipathy could be traced back to his having shot, while firing at a rabbit, a servant, the husband of one of his mistresses. A hare or fox terrified Tycho Brahe fairly out of his wits. William Matthews had a mortal dread of spiders, and when the Duke of Athole, thinking the antipathy feigned, approached him with his hand closed, Matthews drew his sword and was with difficulty prevented from killing himself or the Duke. Marana, the author of the "Turkish Spy" tells us that he would have preferred encountering a lion rather than a spider. Mather records the case of a young woman who could see a person trim his nails with a pair of scissors, but if a knife were employed, she fainted; Beattie that of a man who had a horror of seeing any one handle a cork. La Mothe de Vayer could not bear the sound of any musical instrument, though he delighted in the roar of thunder. Augustus had a mortal fear of thunder and lightning, and although he always carried a sealskin as a talisman against them, would hide if possible in a vault; his terror had been inspired when, during a night march, the lightning struck his litter and killed a slave by his side. Henry III. was similarly affected. A lunar eclipse was too much for the nerves of Bacon. Bayle, the philosopher, never could overcome his antipathy to the sound of water splashing from a pipe or cock. Peter the Great, though later he built a fleet, could not till he was fourteen bear sight of still or running water, especially if he was alone, nor could he cross the shortest bridge in his carriage unless the windows were shut close.

The Emperor Heraclius at the age of fifty-nine conceived such an aversion to the sight of water that it was found necessary to build a bridge of boats across the Bosphorus and screen it closely with boughs in order that he might enter Constantinople. The cases are mentioned of one Nicano, who fainted whenever he heard a flute played, and a woman in Namur who swooned on hearing a bell rung, and a resident of Alcantara who was thrown into convulsions by the sound of the word "wool," though he wore garments of that material. Pennant, the traveller, had a great aversion to wigs, and on one memorable occasion, after exhausting himself in maledictions upon the Mayor of Chester's head covering, snatched it off and fled through the streets with it, pursued by the indignant magistrate. Louis XIV. abhorred the sight of a gray hat, and Lope would not suffer any one to use tobacco in his presence. And every one knows the aversion James I. had to the sight of a naked sword, and how Sir Kenelm Digby used to relate with pride that when the King knighted him, His Majesty turned away his face shuddering and nearly ran the new candidate for knighthood through. Lastly, according to Brantome, while the Queen of Naples, Jane II., was unlike the majority of her sex in being without fear of the smallest mouse that creeps the floor, as much could not be said for Caraccioli, her favorite. He was so timid in all respects that Her Majesty let a mouse loose while he was playing at chess, and in his terror he rushed into the Queen's arms for protection, a new version of the familiar story about "Pussy, ask your mistress."

A Case of Conscience.—A citizen of Detroit entered a Michigan avenue grocery the other day and said he wanted a private word with the proprietor. When they had retired to the desk he began:

"I want to make confession and reparation. Do you remember of my buying sugar here two or three days ago?"

"I do."

"Well, in paying for it I worked off a counterfeit quarter on the clerk. It was a mean trick, and I came to tender you good money."

"Oh, don't mention it," replied the grocer.

"But I want to make it right."

"It's all right—all right. We knew who passed the quarter on us, and that afternoon when your wife sent down a dollar bill and wanted a can of sardines I gave her that bad quarter with her change. Don't let your conscience trouble you at all—it's all right.—Detroit Free Press.

Troubles of Babies.

The hairbreadth escapes which babies go through make Othello's story to Desdemona insignificant in comparison. You hear of them falling out of bed, falling down stairs, swallowing buttons, scalding themselves, burning themselves, burying themselves under table cloths covered with dishes and yet doing very well. That they are liberally provisioned by nature is happily certain. If toothache keeps a big, able bodied man writhing and groaning what would he say to cutting a tooth? And yet a baby will cut a half dozen teeth at a time, and look at you as much as to say, "Pooh, pooh, my dear sir! a mere trifle!" One fit of spasms shall make a strong man crawl upon his stomach, but a baby shall have strong fits of spasms hour after hour and still appear as if it thought life worth living. Wordsworth calls the child "father to the man." But if by "child" the poet meant "baby" we beg respectfully to differ from him. Nothing so completely illustrates the certainty of the unexpected as a baby. The feeble grows strong; the strong grows feeble. The dull and sluggish infant turns out a wise, bright man or woman; the precocious child, whom its mother and father boasted of as an embryonic Shakespeare, with a large admixture of George Stephenson and Mozart in its composition, ends as a mediocrist, without promise and unprofitable. The prophet dealing with babies shall be wise to wait until after the event has happened before he begins to vaticinate. Yet one thing may safely be said of babies—that though the home that has lacked them may have missed a little portion of life's anxieties, it has also missed very great deal of the light and beauty and tenderness which consecrate our homes to our hearts.

Action of Coffee and Sugar on the Stomach.

In a paper presented to the Societie de Biologie (Rev. Med.) M. Leven stated that coffee so far, as is often supposed, from accelerating the digestive process of the stomach, rather tends to impede this. When thirty grammes of coffee diluted in one hundred and fifty of water, is given to a dog, which is killed five hours and a half afterward, the stomach is found pale, its mucous surface being anæmic, and the vessels of its external membrane contracted. The whole organ exhibits a marked appearance of anæmia. Coffee thus determining anæmia of the mucous membrane, thus preventing rather than favoring vascular congestion and opposing rather than facilitating the secretion of gastric juice, how comes it that the sense of comfort is procured for so many people who are accustomed to take coffee after a meal? A repast, in fact, produces, in those whose digestion is torpid, a heaviness of the intellectual faculties and embarrassment of the power of thinking; and these effects, and the disturbance of the head, are promptly dissipated by the stimulant effect which the coffee produces on the nervous centers, as shown by experiments with cæcin. Coffee and tea, when taken in excess, are a frequent cause of dyspepsia, for the anæmic condition of the mucous membrane being periodically renewed, a permanent state of congestion is at last produced, which constitutes dyspepsia. Sugar, which with many doctors has a bad reputation, is an excellent ailment which assists digestion, and should not be prescribed in dyspepsia. By experiment, digestion of meat is found to take place much more completely when sugar is added. Coffee exerts both a local and general action, operating locally by means of its tannin, by diminishing the caliber of the vessels, but acting on the general economy by exciting the nervous centers and the muscular system. It renders digestion slower, and is only of good effect by relieving the feeling of torpor after meals. Its injurious action on digestion may be corrected by adding sugar as to counterbalance its effects on the mucous membrane. This adding sugar to coffee is not only a pleasant practice, but one contributing to digestion.—Scientific American.

At the Post-Office.

A motherly looking woman yesterday carefully handed the stamp clerk at the Post-Office a letter marked "in haste," and inquired if there was any extra charge for writing that on.

"Oh, none at all."

"How soon will the letter go out?"

"In about forty minutes."

"No sooner than that?"

"Well, we might hire a special train and get it off in about twenty minutes."

"Would it be too much trouble?"

"Oh, none at all."

She thought for a moment, turned the letter over three or four times, and finally said:

"I guess I won't ask you to hire a special train, but if you will be kind enough to telegraph my sister that I have written her a letter to tell her that I can't come till Monday, and to be at the depot to meet me, and that mother didn't go to Toledo after all, I shall be ever so much obliged. Good morning."

A Modern Miracle.

Savannah isn't a very good place for tramps. One of the travelling fraternity called the other day at an unpretending looking house on Jones street. He was an exceedingly woe-begone kind of a specimen, and inquired of the vinegar-faced matron who met him at the door whether he could "get a bite," adding, "I am positively exhausted from hunger—haven't had a mouthful for so long that I can hardly put one foot before the other."

"Could you get a bite here?" responded the lady of the house, in a cheerful sort of way. "Well, I think I might accommodate you. Here, Lion!" A massive bull dog appeared in the further end of the hall, with an eager look on his expectant face. It took the tramp but two bounds to clear the twelve steps, and he took down the street at a rate of speed that would have discouraged a professional pedestrian.

"Tell me the age of miracles is past!" murmured the matron, with a motherly smile, as she slammed the door.—Savannah News.

The trial of Julius Hoebel proceeded with great smoothness and celerity at Evansville, Ind., until the clerk said: "Prisoner, stand up and hear the verdict." Then it was found that there was no prisoner, for he had quietly slipped out an hour before.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, Nov. 18, 1881.

John Cessna was beaten for Judge in the Bedford district but it was a close call. Baer had only 13 majority.

Gov. Hoyt has appointed Thursday the 24th inst. as a day of thanksgiving, in conformity with the suggestion of the President.

Judge Bucher's majority in the district composed of Union, Snyder and Mifflin counties is 2,239. Last year the Republican majority in those counties was 1,413—a change of 3,652. This is a triumph indeed.

John Kelly and his Tammany followers worked as usual in the interests of the Republicans of New York at the recent election and succeeded in electing a Republican Surrogate. There does not seem to be much chance for Democratic victories in that State so long as Kelly lives and rules.

Bill McMullin fought with the Republican ringsters in the Second Senatorial district of Philadelphia, and met with disastrous defeat. Joseph P. Kennedy, the choice of the honest and reputable voters was elected by a large majority. It is much to be hoped that "Mully" will be permanently retired as a manipulator in politics.

According to the Lancaster Intelligencer there are two pathetic stories from New York. One is to the effect that the President did not get home in time to be registered, and hence lost his vote, and the other is that Grant and Coukling "walked through" young Astor's district in behalf of his election to congress—and yet he was beaten. This is too utterly touching for anything

Never mind the figures—the Old Dominion plants herself squarely in the line of progress.—Phila. Press.

In private life that sort of "progress" eventually lands its followers in the penitentiary. The day is coming when the Republican party will be a deal more anxious to disavow all sympathy with this wholesale swindling of the people of Virginia, than to claim any glory for defeating the honest Democracy.

California is producing some wonderful trotters, and the East must look to her laurels if she wishes to maintain supremacy upon the turf. A few days ago a yearling filly trotted a mile in 2.43; a two year-old trotted a mile in 2.21, and a quarter in 32 seconds—a 2.08 gait. Both these flyers are of Hambletonian stock. The sporting men of 20 years ago read of such performances with undisguised wonder.

Fourteen common pleas judges were elected in the State last week, seven of whom were Democrats and seven Republicans. Voters evinced a total disregard of party as regards judges, and cast their ballots for the best men without regard to their political faith. Republicans were elected in strong Democratic districts and vice versa. This independence cannot be too highly appreciated as it proves that the people are determined to have ability and purity in judicial offices.

Machine-manager Quay has declared himself in favor of Galusha A. Grow for Governor, and certain newspapers of the State seem to be surprised. We cannot imagine why. In all except name he is as good a Cameron man as Cooper If Quay thinks he can catch the reform vote by any such bastard independent as Grow, he must be losing his political prescience. Grow sold out his friends at the late election of United States Senator, and couldn't he had at any price by Wolfe's friends during the recent campaign. The reform Republicans will demand something better than an oleomargarine reformer—and there are too many of them for a successful neglect of their claims.

Attorney General Palmer has begun proceedings in the Dauphin county court before Judge Pearson, against certain mutual life insurance companies of the State. He has made an application for a quo warranto for the dissolution of the State Capital Mutual Aid Association, of Harrisburg; the Prudential Mutual Aid Association, of Harrisburg; the Southern Pennsylvania Security, of Hanover, York county, and the Steelton Mutual Relief Association, of Steelton. The application alleges that the companies named have violated their charters in various particulars, notably in collecting assessments for the payment of death losses upon only a portion of the surviving members; have knowingly allowed their certificates to be assigned to persons not the legal kindred; made assessments for purposes other than the payment of death losses; and further, that the policies only promise to pay the insured the pro rata realized from the assessment, and that they violate the act in not undertaking to pay a fixed sum, in addition to which specification the application alleges that the franchises are exceeded by said companies in issuing endowment policies.

The Attorney General will be assisted by John B. McPherson representing the Insurance Department. The suits will be pushed and will result in bringing to an end the business of such companies as have been transgressing the law. Honest companies will not suffer.

NOBLE'S DEFEAT.

It is impossible to contemplate the results of the recent election with anything like equanimity. The candidacy of Charles S. Wolfe made it more than probable that Mr. Noble would be elected. Never before was a better opportunity offered for Democratic success, but it was utterly neglected. Three reasons can be assigned for the defeat; first, apathy on the part of voters, who were too indifferent to walk to the polls; second, votes cast for Wolfe which were in reality against Noble; third, trading by the purchasable material in Philadelphia. That city as usual, failed to come to time, only about half the Democratic vote being polled. But not even this was given to Noble who was more than 7000 votes behind Major Veale, a candidate for local office. The notorious Bill McMullen worked with the Republicans and traded wherever he could get a chance to further his own interests.

Wolfe's vote in the State was over 50,000 and to this Democrats largely contributed—a most grievous error. The defeat of Noble is discouraging and the fact might as well be admitted. If the Democrats of the State will not take the trouble to vote and vote straight, when they have every prospect of winning, through the intervention of a third candidate, what probability is there of success when no such favorable state of affairs exists? The venal followers of McMullen and his like in Philadelphia can never be counted upon to do duty in the Democratic ranks, and might as well be eliminated from estimates of the party's strength. The recent election was not creditable to the Democracy nor is it a cheerful subject for meditation.

Official Election Returns of Columbia County held the 8th day of November, 1881.

THE STAR ROUTE CASES.

The prosecution met with a reverse last week, but whether this will be productive of more than a temporary stop to the proceedings remains to be seen. Counsel for the government claim that they have plenty of damaging evidence in reserve and that the trials will go on. Owing to an adjournment of the grand jury an indictment could not be procured before the statute of limitations applied It was therefore determined to proceed by what is known in English law, as information. This proceeding has been decided by Judge Cox to be improper, and he therefore sustained the motion to expel the information from the files of the court, and discharged the defendants. The muddle has given rise to much acrimonious comment and the prosecution is severely criticised for attempting a dubious method for bringing the cases into court. As, however, it is promised that the trials will take place without due loss of time, it may be as well to withhold criticism and await further developments.

GUITEAU'S TRIAL.

The selection of a jury to try the assassin Guiteau began on Monday. The panel was exhausted after five men had been accepted. Guiteau attempted to read a statement in spite of the opposition of his counsel, and subsequently gave the manuscript to a reporter but it was returned. The assassin evidently is sane enough to try and get his effusions into print on all occasions. Mr. Robinson, one of the counsel for the defence asked for more time, when Guiteau addressed the court and said he was ready to proceed with the case. He then peremptorily ordered Mr. Robinson to withdraw. After some trouble Guiteau was induced to take his seat and remain quiet. If the man is insane it is in the desire for notoriety he constantly exhibits.

On Tuesday four more jurors were accepted and sworn. There were no incidents of moment to chronicle. The attendance in court was very large, as it had been on the preceding day.

The three remaining jurors were chosen on Wednesday. The full jury is as follows: John P. Hamlen, restaurant keeper; Fred. W. Brandenburg, cigar dealer; Henry J. Bright, retired merchant, Charles J. Stewart, merchant; Thomas H. Longly, grocer; Samuel F. Hobbs, plasterer; George W. Gates, machinist; Ralph Wormly, colored, laborer; W. H. Browner, commission merchant; Thomas Hienlin, iron worker, and Joseph Prather, commission merchant.

Guiteau has issued another address, this time to the legal fraternity, and asks for assistance in his defense.

Mahone's postmaster at Lynchburg, Statham, who was appointed at the cost of turning out an Union soldier, is under arrest for stabbing a young man with whom he had a dispute. Nice material they are using in Virginia to aid in repudiating the debt of the State.

Cuticura

Scrofulous Itching and Scaly Humors of the Skin, Scalp and Blood Cured.

MIRACULOUS CURE.

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Has paid $400 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so and was Completely Cured. The skin on his head, face, and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months Reported by

F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

The Rev Dr. —— in detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly stealing away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since, an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good result, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured me, so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

LEN. M. FRAILEY, 64 South st., Baltimore.

CUTICURA.

The Cuticura treatment for the cure of Skin, Scalp, and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of Cuticura Resolvent, the new Blood Purifier, and the external use of Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, the Great Skin Cures.

Price of CUTICURA, small boxes, 50c.; large boxes $1. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1 per bottle. Cuticura Soap, 25c. Cuticura Shaving Soap, 50c.

BLOOMSBURG, FRIDAY NOVEMBER 18, 1881.

Get your Thanksgiving turkey yet?

William Werkheiser has put a new freight delivery wagon on the road.

The new steam whistle at Neals' furnace has a most sonorous tone.

The Philologian Society will hold a reunion on Thursday Nov. 24th.

Mr. William Achenbach shot a large wild goose, in Fishingcreek township, last week.

The Scott Town hill has been very much improved by the work done on it this season.

Next Thursday is Thanksgiving day and the usual festive ceremonies will be strictly observed.

Union services will be held in the Methodist church on Thanksgiving day. Rev. Mr. Strunck will preach.

FOUND.—A log chain on Main street. The owner can have it by proving property and paying for this notice.

DAVID LOWENBERG.

A peach tree in the garden of Col. J. G. Freeze, Third and Centre streets, is in bloom, and the Colonel is looking for fruit before Christmas.

Ladies' solid gold watches as low as sixteen dollars. Also gents' solid gold American watches hunting or open face, forty-two dollars at L. Bernhard's Jewelry store.

Rats destroyed six pretty canary birds in Schuyler & Holmes' store last Sunday night. There were ten songsters in the cage and only four escaped the murderous rodents.

The Domestic Sewing Machine for which W. H. Yetter is agent, was awarded the diploma at the Ringtown fair, also at Danville and other places.

The Towanda Journal has been enlarged and donned a new dress, presenting a most attractive appearance. This looks like prosperity and we tender our congratulations.

FOR SALE.—A Baltimore heater of late pattern. Used only a portion of two winters. Will be sold cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. tf

Col. Levi L. Tate desires to sell the Lycoming Chronicle, of which he is the editor and proprietor. He has been in the editorial harness for more than fifty years and needs rest.

A number of ladies of the Lutheran congregation gave a donation party to Mrs. H. Broadt, of this place, on Friday evening last. An abundance of provisions was brought and highly appreciated by Mrs. Broadt.

Messrs. Charles Hottenstein and W. E. Throne have purchased a half interest in the Milton Argus. The new firm will transact business under the name of The Argus Publishing Company.

The Bloomsburg COLUMBIAN has donned a new dress, and it looks as bright as a new silver dollar. The COLUMBIAN is a good newspaper, and we are glad to note this evidence of prosperity.—Wyoming Democrat.

Reports show that wild pigeons are more abundant this fall than they have been for many years, and flocks containing more than three hundred have been noticed in some localities. We have heard of none in this county, however.

Hon. Wm. Taylor, Boston, is well again. Completely cured of a scrofulous humor which poisoned his blood, covering his face and head with sores, by Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in a test case from Pittsburg, has just decided that corporations are liable for consequential damages for injury done to private property, as well as for property actually taken in the exercise of the right of eminent domain.

The next annual session of the Columbia County Teachers' Institute, will be held in the Normal Hall, at Bloomsburg, commencing Monday, Dec. 12th and closing Friday, Dec. 16th. Able instructors have been engaged.

Six good-looking gum-robed girls passed down Main street last Saturday afternoon through the pouring rain, marching in single file, and resembling a procession of nuns. They were supposed to be from the Normal School. Gum again, girls!

The Bloomsburg Columbian has a new dress and a new office and puts on as many airs as a girl over her first beau. Well it has earned the right to, and we are glad to congratulate it upon its deserved prosperity.—Mauch Chunk Democrat.

There will be appropriate services in St. James church, Orangeville, on Thanksgiving day at half past ten o'clock in the morning. A special collection will be taken up for the benefit of the Michigan sufferers. Rev. A. Houtz, pastor.

ECONOMY.

A fortune may be spent in using ineffectual medicines, when by applying Thomas' Eclectric Oil a speedy and permanent cure may be effected. In case of rheumatism, lame back, bodily ailments, or pains of every description, it affords instant relief.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has sustained the wholesome principle that a juror to be competent need not of necessity be an ignorant man who does not read the newspapers and forms no opinion of what he reads. It is only necessary for the juror to be able to decide according to the evidence.

On Monday morning last, constable Harris arrested Chester Williams, a colored man in the employ of O. A. Jacoby, charged by Samuel Stills with threatening to take his (Still's) life, and with carrying a revolver with that intent. J. H. Maize, Esq., held Williams in $200 for a hearing on Monday next.

There is a set of loafers who habitually arrange themselves at the head of the stairs in the Opera House at the close of every entertainment, and vitiate the air with the smoke of vile cigars, through which ladies are compelled to pass. If the entrance were kept clear of these fellows both before and after the performances, it would be much more agreeable to those who attend.

The post office authorities ought to put an additional mail agent on the L. & B. R. R. There is altogether too much matter for one man to handle. Scarcely a day passes in which letters and papers for Bloomsburg are not carried to Scranton or Northumberland and returned on the following day. Such service as that is not what the people desire, nor what the department should be satisfied with. No blame attaches to the mail agent now on the road—he is simply overworked. No agent however quick and attentive can handle a ton of mail matter, and that we are informed is the weight passing over the road each day.

OPINION ON OIL.

L. P. Follett, Marion, O., states that he has used Thomas' Eclectric Oil for burns, and has found nothing to equal it in soothing the pain and giving relief.

When a lecturer has worked the ladies of his audience so near to the weeping point that they have gotten out their handkerchiefs, and then suddenly changes his tone and speaks of the merit of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, he is bound to rouse a feeling of indignation.

A determined warfare has been begun against the mutilation of silver coins, and defaced pieces will not long be taken in payment of debts or purchase of goods. We advise our readers to refuse such coins as have been mutilated, for they are not of full value and may be troublesome to dispose of hereafter.

All ladies who wish to save money in Millinery Goods, will find a fine stock of ladies' plush and felt hats and bonnets, and feathers all colors, wings, flowers, ornaments, velvets, satins and ribbons, for winter wear, all of which you can get at city cost at A. & H. McHenry's store, Benton. Produce taken the same as cash in exchange for any of the above. nov182w

SEYMOUR & STRATTON'S FRAUD.—The Oliver Twist company that played at the Opera House last Friday night had a very small audience, but it was quite as large as they deserved. The acting was of the lowest grade, and the costumes looked like the cast-off garments of a Bowery slum. As the troupe does not pay its bills we warn printers against them.

Capt. William Silvers, formerly a resident of Bloomsburg, died at Weston, Ohio, on Friday, November 4th. He was a soldier in the late war and his life was shortened by the wounds received and exposure undergone during his term of service. His body was taken to St. Mary's, Ohio, and buried beside that of his wife, who died about two years ago in that town. The Captain was well known here, and there are many who will regret to learn of his death.

The Danville Intelligencer records the following fatal accident: "George, son of the late Peter Shultz, in Anthony Township, met with a fatal accident on Tuesday last. It appears that the young man rode a spirited mare in driving some cows to pasture, and was thrown from the animal and fractured his skull. The supposition is that the mare ran away and threw the young man against a tree. He was insensible when found and remained so until his death, which occurred on Wednesday evening last at 7 o'clock.

On Thirty Days Trial.

We will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to young men and older persons who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality, etc., guaranteeing speedy relief and complete restoration of vigor and manhood. Also for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Liver and Kidney difficulties, Ruptures and many other diseases. Illustrated pamphlet sent free. Address Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Michigan.
Oct. 28, '81-1y

Mrs. D. K. Sloan and Annie Reiswick died of small pox in Orangeville, on Tuesday last and were buried at night. There are no additional cases in the town, and every precaution has been taken to protect the community should the disease again appear. Two men from Bloomsburg were sent for to bury the dead, and one of these men on his return wandered about town wearing the clothes he had on when officiating as grave-digger. If this sort of thing is permitted we will be apt to have small pox in Bloomsburg again and with more disastrous results than before. If Orangeville cannot find persons to bury the victims of a dangerous disease, it ought to quarantine for a season those who are sent from healthy places to do the work.

The Democratic county of Montour appears to be going over to the enemy. At the recent election, Republicans were chosen to fill the offices of prothonotary and district attorney. Mr. Gearhart, Republican, had a larger majority for prothonotary than Mr. Butler, Democrat, had for associate judge, and the other Democratic candidates had but meagre majorities. It would seem as if a change of leaders were necessary, if Montour is to be kept in Democratic ranks. At the present rate of progress, the county will be giving Republican majorities all around, before many years. There are too many independent voters now-a-days to warrant the continuance in power of unpopular and inefficient political hacks.

It may not be generally known by farmers, truck patch owners, gardeners and others, but it is nevertheless a fact, that where there are vines still full of unripened tomatoes remaining in the garden in the fall of the year when the frosts come, that if the vines are carefully pulled up by the roots and placed in the cellar or in the garret the green fruit on them will continue to ripen until it has all matured, and thus instead of a great many tomatoes remaining in the garden and going to waste, for they will not ripen in the natural manner after the season for frost has come, you may continue to have tomatoes until late in the winter season. The vines should be raised before the fruit is frost bitten. The dryer the place the more favorable to the ripening process.

That luscious fruit, the peach, is likely to be as scarce next season as it was this year. Many trees that were badly frozen last winter were cut off with the expectation that new tops would grow upon them. They rapidly recovered during the early summer, but their growth was checked by the drought so that very few fruit buds formed on the new tops. The yield from such trees will fall off eighty per cent. Trees that survived the severity of last winter budded late, and their growth was feeble. The recent hot, dry weather has so drained the life from them that many will never recover. The buds which usually appear before frost are shrivelled. It is thought that the drought has affected all sorts of fruit trees so seriously that the prospects for the season of 1882 are discouraging. The extraordinary dryness of the air has prevented the formation of fruit buds. Horticulturists will do what they can to alter these conditions by mulching and manuring.

The Rural New Yorker says, as a remunerative crop, chestnuts have not received their share of attention, and we presume it will be long ere the raising of chestnut trees is made a part of our rural industries. But may there not be money in it? In some foreign countries the chestnut crop is equivalent to the wheat crop in America, both as respects its money value and the uses to which it is put. Chestnut bread, a thing of which Americans are wholly ignorant, constitutes the principal food of thousands in Europe and Asia. The fruit is ground into meal, and puddings, cakes and bread are made from it. Ohio statistics show that her chestnut crop is valued at $80,000, and it could soon be made to reach ten times that amount. The tree is of quite rapid growth, attaining the height of fifteen to twenty-five feet in five years, from the seed: it is, as we know, valuable as timber; can it not be made more valuable here for its fruit?

[Milwaukee Sentinel.]

That wonderful remedy for rheumatism, St. Jacob's Oil has been used by a large number of people in this city, and with effect truly marvelous. Frequent reports are made where sufferers have been afforded relief, and the sale is growing largely. The fact that it is an external remedy commends it to many who would not otherwise think of going out of the beaten track to find a remedy.

It is rumored that certain parties in the lower end of the county are in training for a prize fight. The officers should keep an eye on them.

It has been suggested that it would be a good thing to organize an anti-pun society in town, one of the qualifications being an entire lack of the propensity to make puns. Thus far only one person has been discovered who is eligible, and he is deaf and dumb.

The Stars of November's Sky.

November is rich in material for planetary study. Mercury leads the list with an inferior conjunction, a transit, and a western elongation. Neptune follows Saturn in reaching opposition. Jupiter follows Neptune in arriving at the goal, donning his most superb array for the occasion. The great luminary himself contributes his share to the festive activity of his family, in an annular eclipse. The moon pays her respects to every planet in turn. The grand line of planets clustering beyond and on the same side of the sun remains unbroken, three of the outer planets—Saturn, Neptune and Jupiter, arriving at opposition within three days of each other. The moonless nights of mid-November will be glorious with star-lit beauty. Saturn, Jupiter and Mars will reign as lords of the ascendant, and around them will be grouped some of the brightest stars and constellations that grace the firmament, those twinkling mysteries that fill the soul with emotions of wonder and awe, while it tries to grasp the boundlessness of space and the all pervading power that holds in harmony the shining suns that people the blue vault of heaven.

Our New County Officers.

There is every reason to believe that the gentlemen who were chosen to fill the several county offices, at the recent election, will perform their duties with satisfaction to the public and with credit to themselves. They were elected by handsome majorities and will assume their respective positions with the confidence of the entire community. That they will so conduct themselves as to retain this confidence we have all faith. In this county, where the Democrats are so largely in the majority, an unworthy office-holder reflects discredit upon the party as such, because, a nomination being equivalent to an election ordinarily, no improper candidates ought to be chosen. If an error is made, the Democratic voters are responsible, in a measure and would feel both sorry and indignant. Some of the county officers have been re-elected, and this new lease of power is an evidence that they have faithfully and honestly done their work and maintained their place in the respect and esteem of their fellow men. We believe that those who are soon to undertake official labors for the first time, will be equally successful in winning enviable reputations.

Illegality of Transfer Policies.

Very many of the Mutual Insurance Companies are doing a transfer business. That this is illegal will be apparent by consulting the law which took effect July 12th, 1881. By the provisions of this law the application and a copy of the By-laws form a part of the contract. The application and By-laws of another company cannot be accepted as being the contract of the company issuing. Policies issued without a regular application are not worth, in law, the paper on which they are written. Parties holding policies cannot be compelled to pay assessments and forfeitures cannot be made legal. In case of contest as to payment of claim, in absence of fraudulent application, action could be brought against companies for obtaining money under false pretenses, the penitentiary staring the officers in the face. Speculative policy holders prefer transfering at a nominal rate, rather than pay assessments. This system is ruinous to Mutual Insurance Companies. Those companies who do this kind of business will shortly regret that they ever adopted it. Mutual insurance business must be purified and when companies take hold of this matter in earnest, it will grow and become far more popular than any other system of insurance yet introduced. We condemn "grave-yard insurance," first, last and all the time. Legitimate Mutual Insurance is the best system and properly conducted will supercede all other systems. Let companies protect themselves, and the people will give them their confidence.—Harrisburg Every Saturday Night.

The above fully expresses our views on this subject and is in harmony with our uniform practice with regard to transfers. We have persistently refused to accept transfers, desiring to build up a substantial business on applications regularly made out to the company. We have not been slow to recognize the ruinous tendency of this system. It is not nor can it be a part of the policy of our company. We too, in common with all right thinking people, are desirous of a purification of this business. The most pronounced enemies of Mutual Insurance companies confess that an honest, legitimate business may be done. Such is our aim and we will always be found ready to second any such measures as will tend to secure a thoroughly honest business. There are species of impositions against which it is practically impossible for companies to guard—notably fraudulent applications. But when fraud is disclosed by investigation, this company stands ready always to aid in enforcing such legal measures as will lead to the apprehension and punishment of all guilty parties.

Executors' and administrators' account books, containing full instructions how to settle an estate, receipts, &c., for sale at this office. These are the most convenient books of the kind ever printed, and they are in use all over the State. tf

The first Monday of December is the next day for constables to go into court and return under oath that the guide boards are all up, and that there are no violations of the liquor laws. This has come to be the stereotyped form of return and there is only an occasional departure from it. But every body knows that the guides are not all up, and that habitual drunkards and minors obtain liquor whenever they want it, just the same.

THE COUNTRY.

Who that has ever lived any time in the country but must have heard of the virtues of Burdock as a blood purifier. Burdock Blood Bitters cure dyspepsia, biliousness and all disorders arising from impure blood or deranged liver or kidneys. Price $1.00, trial bottles 10 cents.

In a county containing over four thousand Democrats we ought to have several hundred more subscribers to the COLUMBIAN, than are now taking it. If our readers will assist us in running up the list we promise that when it reaches 1800 we will refuse all patent medicine and other foreign advertisements, and devote the space to reading matter. This can be accomplished if only a few of our friends will each send us one or two new subscribers. We do not offer a chromo, but will give you the benefit of an increased list.

Widow Bedott.

The largest and best audience of the season filled the Opera House last Tuesday evening to witness the rendition of the play of "Widow Bedott" by Nell Burgess and his company. There is little to be said in favor of the piece. It is not comedy but very broad farce, has the merest apology for a plot, is coarse and at times unpardonably vulgar. There is urgent need of extensive pruning to make the performance worthy of a place on the stage. It is, with all its faults, irresistibly funny and was received with shouts of laughter. Those who were most earnest in their denunciation of its grossness, found it utterly impossible to keep a straight face at the Widow's garrulity, mendacity and impudence.

Mr. Burgess' impersonation of the Widow is a clever bit of acting. His make-up, voice, facial play and gestures are all in keeping with the requirements of the role and as such deserve commendation. The Widow is the only character possessing the slightest merit and it is a pity that it should be marred by very unnecessary vulgarity.

We are informed that, quite recently, the play was remodeled and "much of the vulgarity cut out." If this be true, the original must have been a masterpiece of coarseness. Mr. Burgess has sufficient ability as a comedian to warrant the belief that in a better play he would show to advantage.

The great superiority of DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP over all other cough remedies is attested by the immense popular demand for that old established remedy.

CONSUMPTION.

IMPORTANT TO THE PUBLIC AS WELL AS THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

Hall's Journal of Health, referring to consumption, makes the following important statement:

"Consumption usually begins with a slight dry cough in the morning, then, on going to bed getting more and more frequent, with more and more phlegm, increasing debility, thinness of flesh, shortness of breath, and quickness of pulse. In fatal cases its average is about two years; hence the importance of arresting the disease at as early a stage as possible, and the sooner rational means are employed for this purpose the greater the chance of success. The disease is owing to an irritation commencing in the throat and extending to the lungs, so that their action is interfered with, and the blood does not receive sufficient oxygen to purify it. The most marked sign of lung disease is emaciation; and the most positive indication of returning health is increase in weight.

So speaks Hall's Journal of Health, and we may add that in desperate cases; and, in fact, in all cases of consumption, or troubles of the throat and lungs, immediate relief may be obtained and a permanent cure effected by the use of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the lungs, a medicine known for more than thirty-five years as an unfailing remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis and all pulmonary and pectoral diseases. That the worst cases of consumption have been cured by the use of Hall's Balsam has been attested to by the thousands who have used it, or who have been cognizant of its wonderful medical efficacy. nov. 11-6w

CUTLERY.

Everybody seems surprised at the extent of our stock of Cutlery. In no store in the county can such a variety of patterns be seen. In Scissors and Shears we have all sizes and at various prices according to quality, the better grades being our specialty. Pocket knives any quality from 10 cents to 4.50 each. The large quantities of fine Razors we sell is a strong reccommendation as to their superiority. A lady's pride is her table and nothing adds more to its attraction than a handsome set of knives and forks, our line is large, new patterns and low prices for reliable goods.

We have just opened a handsome line of carving knives and forks, new designs with patent rests, prices from 50 cents to 4.50 per pair. Call and see them.

STOVES.

Cold weather is near at hand and already many are looking around for stoves. The manufacturers have been over-crowded with orders, and it is almost impossible to get them. We have already received several and are daily adding to our stock. Owing to the universal satisfaction the Argand has given we still keep it as our leading base heating stove, and if you wish to see a perfect beauty call and look at this year's pattern; a little high in price it's true, but in this age the people demand handsome stoves and the more handsome they are the more they cost. We have a variety of other very nice stoves at prices within the reach of all. The Gold Medal is the largest and handsomest base heating stove for the money brought to this town. In 1879 we introduced Spear's new Silver Moon Heater for heating two or more rooms and owing to the great satisfaction they have given, our trade has steadily increased on them. We warrant every one to give perfect satisfaction and have got to hear the first word of complaint or take one back. For ease of management, economy of fuel, great draft and radiating powers, they stand without an equal. Our long experience together with that of Mr. Isaiah Hagenbuch, who has charge of our Stove and Tinware Department, has enabled us to study the wants of the people and make our selections accordingly. We cordially invite all in want of Stoves to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, and examine our stock which we shall consider no trouble to show you. Stove repairs of all kinds furnished to order, grates and fire brick for the common cook stoves constantly on hand.

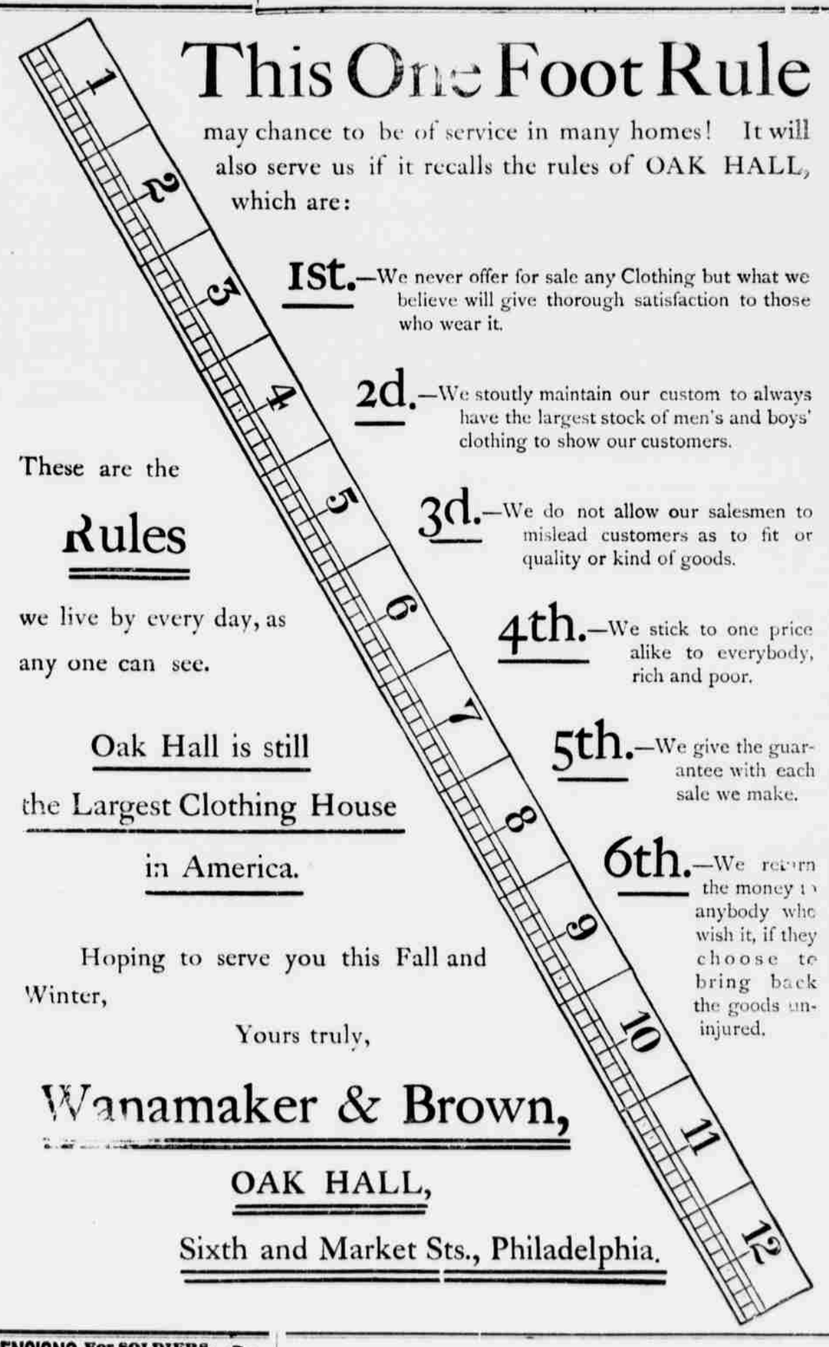
This One Foot Rule



may chance to be of service in many homes! It will also serve us if it recalls the rules of OAK HALL, which are:

1st.—We never offer for sale any Clothing but what we believe will give thorough satisfaction to those who wear it.

2d.—We stoutly maintain our custom to always have the largest stock of men's and boys' clothing to show our customers.

3d.—We do not allow our salesmen to mislead customers as to fit or quality or kind of goods.

4th.—We stick to one price alike to everybody, rich and poor.

5th.—We give the guarantee with each sale we make.

6th.—We return the money to anybody who wish it, if they choose to bring back the goods uninjured.

These are the Rules we live by every day, as any one can see.

Flavor of Butter.

Among all the inventions that have as yet been brought out to aid the makers of butter in their work and to increase the butter-yield of milk, nothing has yet been discovered to impart uniformity to the flavor at all seasons of the year. And although much has been accomplished in the way of uniformity in the make and appearance, still the same difference in flavor remains, which no mechanism nor manipulation can correct, nor is it likely ever to be, as it depends mainly on the character of the food the cows get at the time the butter is made. In the months of June and October, when the first and second crops of grass are in their most vigorous state, the butter possesses the finest flavor, and the only way to retain the latter in its nearest condition is to cut the grass when its power to transmit it is at its height.

If two observations are taken of the state of the pastures in June and September, the mystery is at once explained. At the earlier period the herbage of the pastures is at its most vigorous growth, the stem and blades the fullest of sap, and rich with the juices and elements which push forward the plant, thus supplying a food not to be excelled, either for its milk or flesh-producing qualities, or in the flavor it imparts to either. At the latter period the food having become in a measure dried up, and crisp, the juices either evaporated or converted into woody fibre, and the seeds of noxious weeds mingled, as they are, more or less, with the grass, are all calculated to impart their bitter flavor to the butter. In curing the hay, especially if the grass become "dead ripe" before being harvested, a large per cent of the flavor is lost, it being an element which no curing or storing away can preserve, not even in the much-talked of silos, and the only way to come nearest to its preservation is by feeding mill stuff and roots.

Repeated trials have shown that grass cut in bloom retains this butter flavor the nearest, and is then in its best condition to impart it to the butter, even when fed in winter, and although second crop clover may be equally as good for its milk-producing qualities, yet the butter lacks the solidity and quality of that made from the earlier cut crop. It may be, and no doubt is very advisable to prolong as far as possible this vigorous growth of the pasturage by sowed corn, millet, &c., in order to keep up the supply of butter and milk, but it will be a long time, if ever, before anything can be made to take the place in supplying the aroma of the coffee in June. The peculiar flavor imparted to butter by the grass at that season of the year cannot be extended to a later period, nor secured by any substitutes, the modern silos to the contrary notwithstanding, for no fermented food that has had its sugar changed to alcohol can ever be made to answer in the place of early cut grass in producing finely flavored butter. The relative excellence and cheapness of the food may be preserved, but nothing can restore the lost flavor of the butter in the winter so well as mill feed accompanied with roots.—Baltimore Sun.

Barley for Feeding.

In this country barley is used mainly for brewing; in Europe and Eastern countries it is fed to stock, particularly horses. As compared to oats it is more nutritious and less heating. The product of an acre of barley is of more value as an article of food for horses or other animals than the product of an acre of oats of equal quality. The grain being harder when dry than oats, it cannot be consumed so well in a raw state, but if fed ground it should be soaked in water or boiled. When ground and fed in conjunction with cut fodder, there is nothing superior as food for working teams. Barley keeps the system open and the skin soft. So long as our American farmers grow barley with no use for it in view but malting, so long will it be subject to extreme fluctuations in price, and the business a risky and uncertain one for the grower. But when the value of it for feeding stock is realized the markets will be steadier and the profits of the crop more certain. Many farmers grow both barley and oats, the one to sell and the other to feed. It would be wiser, if the soil is good for barley as most all soils are—to grow a portion at least for feeding purposes instead of oats. Ground barley is an excellent food for fattening hogs. We know from actual experience that horses will perform as much labor when fed on barley as they do when fed on oats. During the Mexican war all the grain that horses and mules had from the time the army left Jalapa for the interior was barley and corn but mostly barley. Cavalry horses as well as those used for teaming purposes could not be in better condition than they were.

CURING CORN FODDER.—The "New England Farmer, referring to the fact of much corn fodder spoiling when being cured, gives the following plan as a safe one to follow: A good way is to set firmly in the ground a small stake or large sized bean pole, around which a few armfuls of corn is set and bound securely near the top. This makes a firm center around which to build. Then set up more corn, placing it evenly all around, and leaning it no more than necessary to have it stand. When enough is placed to make a large stack, all that can cure, draw a rope, with a slip noose in one end around the stack as tight as convenient, using a step ladder to stand upon, if the corn is very tall. An assistant can now bind with a straw band or with selected stalks, after which the rope may be removed. If doing the work alone the rope can be tied while the band is being put on. Corn fodder well put up in this way, may be kept if desired, in the field till winter.

A gentleman who was introduced to Henry Labouchere at the Beefsteak Club mistook him on the moment for the son of a well-known legislator in the upper House of Parliament. "I heard a most forcible speech from your father a few nights ago in the Lords," said the new acquaintance. "You don't say so," replied Labouchere. "Poor father. He died many years ago. I often wondered where he had gone."

There is in Roumelia a valley known as the Kezanlik, entirely given up to rose culture. During the flowering season it is from the top of the hills on either side one mass of flowers. So saturated is the air with the perfume that it clings to the hair and the clothes, and the scent remains for days on the latter. The essence sells wholesale in Paris at 1,500 and 2,000 francs the kilo, and is retailed at 5,000 francs and over.

Mr. Walter F. Adams, of Westboro, Mass., writes: "For years I suffered the horrors of dyspepsia and indigestion. They seemed to weaken every organ of life, and completely shattered my nervous system. At night when I lay down I felt I could not live until morning. Heartburn pained me most terribly. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters. It suited my case precisely, and now my stomach digests any kind of food, and my sallow complexion and other symptoms of ill health are all gone and at night I enjoy most refreshing, dreamless slumber."

A Mean Joke.

Gallagher and Bagbag recently went away together and stopped at the same hotel. Their rooms were together with a door between them. Bagbag started to shave but discovered there were no towels in the room. Said Gallagher: "I'm going down stairs and will order some sent up." He left and Bagbag proceeded to lather his face. Gallagher went to the office, but he did not order towels. He said: "That man with me has fits of violent insanity and I think he's got one on him now." This said, Gallagher went out for a stroll. A waiter went up to Bagbag's door to reconnoitre. Bagbag was waiting impatiently for the towels. The longer he waited the uglier he got. He swore vigorously. The waiter heard and went down stairs and reported. Meantime Bagbag got tired of waiting and rang the bell. Nobody deigned respond. He rang again, vigorously and heartily cursing their delay. By that time the clerk and two waiters were outside his door, listening. They could hear him swear as I stamp around. They thought he must be very busy. And he couldn't understand why his bell wasn't answered. He rang it with all his might, and the maledictions he heaped on Gallagher and the house were frightful. He had got his face lathered, and could neither proceed nor remove the lather till he got the towels, and, as he was in great haste to get to a wedding that he had come to town to see, and the time was growing short, the delay made him nearly delirious. The listening party in the entry fairly held its sides sped. Finally Bagbag could stand it no longer. He started out to get towels himself. With coat off, face lathered and a razor in his hand he did look mad. As he came out the listners fled with howls. He called to them to stop, but they would not. He pursued. Every body fled from him. Amazed, he rushed at everybody he saw to get an explanation. The house was put in a state of the wildest excitement as they raced over it, up and down stairs and across halls and parlors. Finally they trapped Bagbag in a closet and shut the door on him. They then sent for the police and a doctor, and when they opened the door and Bagbag stepped out he was secured. Protests and explanations availed naught. They knew he was insane, bound him and had lathered his head to shave it, when Gallagher returned and rescued him.

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE HOW TO GAIN HEALTH.

HARRISBURG, PA., March 30, 1881.

Nothing is more charming and attractive than a thoroughly healthy, perfectly formed woman: a bright-eyed, rosy, laughing, joyous, happy-faced girl, one who finds keen pleasure in merely living. An invalid wife or mother is an object of sympathy in an otherwise contented household. Happy the home whose women folk enjoy perfect health. In my practice I have always recommended sickly women to use Brown's Iron Bitters. In case of irregularities, dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, nausea, sour stomach, nervousness and exhaustive debility, I find it exceeds all other remedies as a true medicinal tonic. It never fails to gently soothe, refresh and strengthen the general system, and especially those parts made weak by continued distress; and what satisfies me most is, that the cures, although in some instances gradual, are always permanent.—M. D.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

The Great Unfailing SPECIFIC FOR Liver Complaint.

THE SYMPTOMS OF LIVER COMPLAINT are uneasiness and pain in the side, sometimes pain in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism; the Stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; bowels, in general, costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain and dull, heavy sensation; considerable loss of memory, with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done; often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the Liver is generally the organ most involved.

REGULATE THE LIVER, AND PREVENT Dyspepsia, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Chills and Fever, Headache, Colic, Depression of Spirits, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Piles, etc.

Tonic, Alterative and Cathartic!

Simmons Liver Regulator, purely vegetable, is the medicine generally used in the South to arouse the torpid Liver to healthy action.

It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy on the liver and kidneys.

The action of the Regulator is free from nausea or griping. It is most effective in starting the secretions of the Liver, causing the bile to act as a cathartic. When there is an excess of bile in the Stomach, the Regulator is an active purge; after the removal of the bile it will regulate the bowels and impart vigor and health to the whole system.

Ayers

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in most true proportions accurately adjusted to ensure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experience, and are the most effectual remedy that has been discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. Ayer's Pills are specially adapted to this class of diseases. They promptly restore the digestive and assimilative powers, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their private and by all medical institutions, in one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they may be relied upon for their unvarying uniformity and certainty in producing the desired effect, and may be administered to children with perfect safety.

Ayer's Pills are an effectual cure for Constipation, Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gout, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Diseases of the Livery, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.
